Lock snapping as a means of forced entry into homes is on the increase in some areas of the country, but it's a crime that can be easily beaten.

With the intention of highlighting both the lock snapping issue and the solution on a nationwide platform, the Neighbourhood and Home Watch Network has recruited Avocet Hardware as its primary sponsor for security products. The West Yorkshire firm manufactures the ABS Snap Secure lock, which features a patented system that guarantees against lock snapping.

Michael Tuck, Managing Director of Avocet Hardware, said:

"The rise in lock snapping is directly related to the increased use of uPVC and other double glazed doors, which are fitted as standard with a Euro cylinder lock that can be snapped and removed in a matter of seconds using nothing more than simple DIY tools.

"Our ABS Snap Secure lock has been designed specifically to prevent this crime. It is one of the first locks of its type to be accredited to the new British Standard TS007 (three stars), is the only retro-fit euro cylinder that has passed the new SS312 Sold Secure Diamond standard, and is approved by Secured by Design."

Jim Maddan, Chairman of the Neighbourhood and Home Watch Network, added:

"As with any crime, prevention is always our goal, which is why we are delighted to have Avocet Hardware on-board as a primary sponsor. The company has impressed us with its commitment to eradicating a criminal practice that is all too easy with a product that is proven to keep burglars at bay."

This proof comes from a Leeds City Council initiative that began in 2010 and to date has seen 10,000 ABS Snap Secure locks installed in homes in East Leeds. This, alongside other police initiatives, has resulted in a 36 per cent drop in burglary rate in the year to October 2012 – a figure that equates to 3,200 fewer victims than the previous year.

"Switching to an ABS Snap Secure lock is a precautionary measure, but for those who wish to stop crime through prevention and have uPVC doors it simply must be done," added Michael Tuck.

Adam Simmonds (Northamptonshire's Police and Crime Commissioner)

Priorities include reducing violent crime by 40%, tackling alcohol related crime, getting tough on anti-social and drunken behaviour and domestic abuse.

There will be a strong focus on eradicating drugs, reducing acquisitive crime; and improving services and support for victims of crime so their voices are not drowned out by other interest groups.

Numbers of police officers will stay at 1,220 full-time equivalent, the strength of officers in post when I came into office (unlike forecast falls in numbers in other places).

I will support the Chief Constable to increase the proportion of officers who are front-line constables by keeping back-office and more senior roles as lean as possible. We will cut back-office costs and bureaucracy to maximise the time front-line officers spend visible in communities.

The police officer front-line will be strengthened with a new reservist force of police officers paid to work around 20 days a year. There will be no reduction in the number of PCSOs funded directly by the Commission. And I will expand

POLICE BUDGET

2013-2014

0% increase to your council tax precept!

The Police and Crime Commissioner has issued his first annual Revenue Budget which covers the period April 2013 to March 2014. While not increasing local taxation the Commissioner's budget both increases the number of police officers in Northamptonshire and provides funding for a number of innovative new initiatives.

The Commissioner has decided not to increase the council tax precept which is the amount he can raise from local taxes so as to protect the people of Northamptonshire from higher taxation. Despite not increasing the council tax the new budget will increase the total number of police officers in Northamptonshire.

The current number of police officers will remain at 1,220. New investment will expand the number of special constables and create a paid police reserve. Police funding for PCSOs will remain at its current level. Overall this will result in increased visible policing which is what people have told the Commissioner they want.
